WINTER 2018

Blessings for Our Stable and Sandy

Notes from a mushball. The holidays reach into our hearts. All the trappings, decorations, shopping to find just the right Wow gift for those we love. Funny how in the midst of our happiness, hearing a touching story makes the sadness and pain of those who are helpless and in need seem so much more poignant. Like our Sandy.

Sandy is one of our very first rescue horses. She is a beautiful, sweet Paint Quarter Horse-cross. Even though she is blind in one eye she is still gentle and sweet — mild enough for children. But, she does have the blindness issue, a problem which caused two failed adoptions and brought her back to us. Why? A simple, but not so obvious answer. A blind animal can only see on one side...if someone approaches on the blind side without first speaking to her, she gets startled and quickly swings her head around to see what's going on. And as she swings, her head can hit anyone in the blind area. So, instead of learning how to approach her, they gave up and brought her back.

Sandy is now a Sanctuary horse and will live out her life here but her situation has changed. Her eye has gotten worse—it has become a constant irritant, distressing, and probably painful. She needs to be evaluated at the hospital but we expect that her eye will have to be removed. We can't leave her in pain, but this evaluation and surgery will cost upwards of $3500 so we are appealing to you. This is a horse who has done her job and done it well. She deserves a good life, she's earned it and we want to give it to her, but we can't do it alone. Sandy is our Christmas project. Will you help?

"Feedbags were hung in the stable with care..."

We now have 14 in our rescued equine family. Your donations feed and support them and let us go out to the kill pens and save others who are waiting.

Is This You?

"Ever since I was a little kid the idea of "horse" just tickled me. Always wanted one...don't know anything about 'em...but they're so big and beautiful. What would I do? Do they bite? Can I pet one? When I meet one, will he like me?"

If you are thinking about any of this, the horses are here waiting for new friends. Horses are very social animals and they will happily bond with a person who likes and cares about them. They sense it and they respond. Horses love to be talked to, groomed, and petted, it's the kind of attention that they crave. An equine friend will nuzzle and let you kiss noses.

Here is your quiz: Do you:

- * Love animals.
- * Want to meet others with similar interests.
- * Have knowledge and talents to share.
- * Want to help horses in need and help prevent neglect and abuse of horses
- * Desire to expand your knowledge of horses and horse care.
- * Want to teach your children the value of giving.
- * Want to make a difference.

In addition to falling in love with one or more horses, you'll be asked to help with watering, cleaning (bowls and other stuff), organizing equipment, sweeping and of course, mucking.

All you have to do is come and meet some of our gang. We have all sizes—from minis (see Snowflake's picture) to ponies, to a tall, graceful pedigree race horse. And we have a donkey named Shrek who makes the most awful noises.

Be sure to bring your poop-proof boots.

A little holiday nose-nuzzling going on

The Plight of the Race Horse

Each year 175,000 horses ship to Mexico and Canada in a grueling trip with no water, no food, and no room to move in the packed trailers. They are then brutally slaughtered for human consumption in foreign countries even though they are unfit as food because of the chemicals and medications they've received.

Many were winning race horses and although the race business frowns upon it, as many as 20,000—30,000 are killed annually. Recently, we helped save four beautiful race horses, Jennaluvspoppy, Resolution Bay, Buddys Moon and Blue Boyd.

Blue Boyd looked like any other dejected brown horse that was found thin and injured in a kill pen, even though he should have been treated like royalty—his grand sire is Seattle Slew the Triple Crown winner and his sire Capote was once worth $800,000. Imagine winning up to $650,000 for your owner and then being dumped in a kill pen. Our mission is to end this cruelty and to save these horses. If your heart is touched, help us save them—from the gallant race horses who have given so much to the Lancaster County farm horses weary from pulling the heavy loads, they are in despair...we are their only hope.

Through our efforts and the help of our network and friends who align with us against this atrocity we managed to save these four who are now living together in safety on a beautiful farm.
